

EXPLORING LOCAL HISTORY RESOURCES

Educator Workshop – Friday, October 11, 2013

Join a team of local historians and educators to learn about new online resources for teachers and students while exploring three of Seattle’s unique downtown attractions: the Klondike Gold Rush Museum, Milepost 31, and the SR 99 Tunnel Construction Viewing Platform. King County’s newest major transportation projects will be discussed and ideas on how to explore these present-day history events in the classroom will be examined. Teachers will receive packets of materials and free admission to the workshop sites. 12:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Some walking required. Rain or shine. RSVP for workshop at education@historylink.org.

Workshop Co-Presenters:

- Carol Buswell – Education Specialist, The National Archives at Seattle
- Scott Davies -- Education Director, Pike Place Market
- Patricia Filer – Education Director, HistoryLink.org
- Katie Johnson – Outreach/Program Specialist, Seattle Times Newspapers In Education
- Tim Karle – Education Specialist, Klondike Gold Rush NHP - Seattle
- Jane Morton – Education Coordinator, Eastside Heritage Center
- Jennifer Ott – Staff Historian, HistoryLink.org
- Connie Walker Gray – Project Manager, 520History.org

Photo Credits and Captions: (left) Secretary Hammond checks out the SR99 TBM model. Courtesy WSDOT. (center) Junior Rangers at the Klondike Gold Rush Museum. Courtesy National Park Service. (right) Children tour the Pike Place Market. Courtesy Mark Ahlness.